say, "We have selected you to be our judge in the matter, and stand by your decision."

Here are the two statements submitted by our readers:

1. "WHEN THE PRICE IS HIGHER, THE SUPPLY IS GREATER, AND THE DEMAND IS LESS."
2. "WHEN THE PRICE IS LOWER, THE SUPPLY IS LESS, AND THE DEMAND IS GREATER."

We see nothing unusually enlightening or intelligent in the two propositions submitted by our readers.

The price of any product, under normal conditions, goes UP as a supply of that article goes DOWN.

Consumption of the article is less, BECAUSE FEWER PEOPLE CAN AFFORD TO PAY THE HIGHER PRICE.

When a thing is scarce and the price goes up, men's cupidity, their desire for profit, is aroused, and a great many of them try to produce that particular thing. Then, very often, the supply shortly becomes excessive, prices fall, the producer suffers, and the consumer APPARENTLY gains.

As a matter of fact, producers, consumers and all LOSE in our disorganized, stupid, competitive system of production, with its so-called "LAW" of supply and demand.

For instance, suppose that the potato crop of the United States should be an absolute failure. Suppose the harvest produced only about one-quarter of the usual supply of potatoes this year. Those having that small supply in their possession would put up the price. Potatoes would be four, five, or even six, dollars a barrel, instead of two dollars and a half. The poor would do without, and those lucky enough to have good crops would make an unusual profit. The NEXT year thousands of farmers that had not been raising potatoes, tempted by the high prices, would rush in, and next year's crop would be an OVERSTOCK.

Then the price would fall, and the poor people would have plenty of potatoes at a lower price, and the farmers would not get enough for their potatoes to pay for the fertilizer, labor and FREIGHT.

And that is about the way it goes in our helter-skelter, haphazard, UNCIVILIZED system of production and distribution.

If the man who PRODUCES is happy and gets a good price, the man who CONSUMES is unhappy, because he has to pay a high price and not have as much as he needs.

We should advise Messrs. Solomon and Bog to leave alone the particular political economy with which they have been puzzling their minds. Let them try to look at things for themselves, from the primitive, commonsense point of view. Political economy, especially as discussed by modern writers, is largely a patchwork of guessing, the origin and foolishness.

Some of the men at whom the political economists laugh most heartily—such men as Ruskin and Henry George—really have published suggestive, valuable ideas on political economy, often unconsciously borrowed, of course.

We advise our two readers to try to form THEIR OWN ideas on these questions and not to puzzle their minds with guessings on political economy, very obscure at best.

Just remember that the earth is a great big round farm given to human beings. They are to develop, grow and become civilized on the big farm by DEVELOPING THE FARM, AND HELPING AND DEVELOPING EACH OTHER.

Men at first were all enemies, fighting each other, not only with knives, bows and arrows, but also with THE CUNNING OF THE MERCHANT AND TRADER. The man who sold anything to another always tried to cheat and get the better of the bargain. That is about the situation still. The idea of a man is to get all he can from his neighbor and give the neighbor as little as possible. Gradually we are working out of that; but we are not out of it by any means yet.

The benefit of one class means too often the misfortune of another. If the man who builds a house gets very big pay, then the man who lives in the house must pay bigger rent. AND FOREVER.

If the farmer gets a good price for his crops, the workingman whose wages perhaps have not been increased, finds it harder to feed his children. And so it goes.

Until very recently everything was helter-skelter, savage COMPETITION. Every man was against his neighbor, trying to get labor as cheap as he could and to sell the products of labor as dearly as he could.

The much hated Trusts are doing good in this world because they in their own corrupt way, are bringing us out of that cutthroat stage. They are as uncivilized as anybody, and meaner and more extortionate they are as unscrupulous as anybody, and meaner, and more extortionate than anybody else. They are doing their work of extortion on a BIGGER SCALE. But at least THEY ARE KILLING OLD COMPETITION. They are uniting men in great bodies to work together. They are managing industries so as to prevent eventually the sudden panics, the overproduction, the great crises.

They have at least carried the world on from stupid competition to intelligent, selfish co-operation and organization.

world, all the men on it, will organize for their own BENEFIT, and then we shall have real organization based on equality.

Strange as it may seem, all of the people will eventually have all they need, all will have an opportunity to work, and all will be compelled to work.

This world will then be very different from what it is now. And even then real civilization will only have begun.

The end of the little fights about supply and demand, and poverty, and hunger, and want and extortion, and wages, will be only one stage in man's development. After that will come the really great period that OF UNIVERSAL INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT. We are now like a crowd of fighting sailors landed on a desert island, struggling one another.

shall become some day a world nation of real thinking.
